About Envirothon

The National Conservation Foundation (NCF) Envirothon is North America's largest environmental and natural resource conservation problem-solving, team-building, and leadership experience and competition. High school students (9th–12th graders) across the globe expand their knowledge and explore environmental education and natural resource conservation through the study of aquatic ecology, forestry, soils and land use, wildlife, and current environmental issues. The program began in Pennsylvania in 1979, and since then, hundreds of thousands of students have participated in Envirothon across the United States, China, Canada, Singapore, and now the Virgin Islands.

The Iowa Envirothon is proudly presented and organized by the Conservation Districts of Iowa (CDI), with support from the Iowa Conservation Education Coalition (ICEC). Iowa hosted its first Envirothon competition in the 1995-1996 school year and continues to provide a unique opportunity for students to engage with their classmates, community, and local environment. Through regional testing and the state competition, students have the opportunity to develop their critical thinking, cooperative problem-solving, and decision-making skills. The state-winning team represents Iowa at the international NCF Envirothon competition every summer.

Be a part of the future

The Iowa Envirothon isn't just a competition. Through this program, students are encouraged to examine environmental issues from multiple perspectives and to consider the interests of their entire community as they develop their own opinions.

This experience equips students with the knowledge and skills to educate others and inspire local action in their own communities. Not only do the skills students learn while participating in the Iowa Envirothon prepare them for success in future academic and workplace endeavors, but they also prepare them to become lifelong environmental stewards.

And help continue a legacy
